Govt to amend 22-year-old IT Act, says Chandrasekhar

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Rajkot: Union minister of state for electronics and information technology, Rajeve Chandrasekhar said that the central government will amend the 22-years-old IT Act and introduce a new Digital India Act.

Addressing media persons in Rajkot on Tuesday, the minister who also holds the portfolios of skill development and entrepreneurship shared his experience of his startup in 1995. "There is a very conducive atmosphere for startups currently in the country as compared to earlier times. This decade of development by technology is very important for India."

He further said that a few decades ago, the opportunity and capital was available to only a few industrialists but now there is a democratisation of opportunities.

"New entrepreneurs from more than 75,000 startups have come forward," said Chandrasekhar, who was in Rajkot to take part in mega startup event organized by two private universities.
